

What choices do plants make regarding spatial organization when they are competing for a scarce resource?

Theory suggests that aggregation strongly reduces average landscape water use

For a given LAI, clumped vegetation has a lower expected average water consumption

